

State Prison Appointments.

Warden-elect Frank Bell has made the following appointments: Geo. Brown of Storey county, Deputy Warden; M. Schitsline of Eureka, Captain of the Guard; Thomas Frittsimmons, Lyon, Commissary; J. S. Burlingame, Ormsby, Lieutenant of the Guard; E. L. Bingham, Elko, Thomas Dale, Eureka, J. King-Lunder, Henry Nofsinger, Humboldt, and Samuel Fairbanks, Nye, Guards.

There were ten guards to be appointed, but the Warden-elect wisely considered it bad policy to change them all at once. The new Warden will take charge at the prison next Monday.

A New Club in Carson.

The little girls of the city have taken to club life. An organization has been formed called "The Little Girls' Sewing Club."

The club is composed of about a dozen little girls. They meet every Saturday and do fancy sewing. By next Summer they propose to have enough fancy work on hand to have a fair and make a public exhibit of their work.

The other day they had a meeting and by a unanimous vote decided to give the MORNING APPEAL all their printing, "provided the paper would guarantee to do it for nothing." The bargain was closed on those terms.

The membership of the club is as follows:

Eva Doyle, President; Pearl Cowling, Clara Cristler, Lucy Davis, Nettie Garcia, Flora Hall, Theresa Hark, Edith Jones, Naomi Keith, Ivy Millard, Ethel Millard.

These little ladies are very enthusiastic in their work and the club is a growing institution.

The Trotting Club.

The Capital Trotting Club met at the Court House last night and permanently organized. D. Circe was elected President, H. R. Mighels Secretary and John Ullrick Treasurer. A committee of five was appointed to solicit membership. The initiation fee was placed at $2 and the monthly dues $1. It is proposed to have racing for all grades of horses—fast and slow.

Cursed Nevada.

Folks who are at all superstitious or who take any stock in the potency of malediction will find an interest in the story told by Wells Drury about a man named Jernegan, one of the founders of the famous Territorial Enterprise of Virginia City, that suspended several weeks ago. The paper was started in 1858 at Genoa a Mormon settlement in what was then known as Carson county, Utah. After it was moved to Carson City, in 1860, Jernegan was frozen out on account of his inferior financial ability. He vowed he would get even with somebody and Drury tells how he did it: "His time came at last. On his deathbed out in White Pine county, near where Barney made his historic remark about it being a wild night on Treasure Hill, Jernegan left a legacy of malediction—it was all he had to leave anybody—for the Enterprise. 'I call on God to curse the Enterprise and all, dead or alive, who robbed me,' he wrote in his leather covered diary, which was found in the cabin where he died, 'and I also call down the curses of the Great Jehovah on Nevada by quarter sections and subdivisions.' That was twelve years ago. It took a long time for him to get operation on his play, but his system seems to be working all right."

Maute Gets in One.

During the past week Maute has been fighting hard in the Senate to rescue the office of State Printer from being consolidated with another office. Foley has been giving him considerable trouble and raising objections until Maute began arraying himself in war paint. The main hitch was the producing of qualifications for the State Printer, Foley holding that any qualified voter who was elected to any office could not be deprived of the right to serve. Maute finally accepted a substitute and Foley still kept on his collar. He urged that one section was unconstitutional and Maute called attention to the fact that it was copied verbatim from a previous section drawn up by Foley himself. A general smile passed around the room in which Foley was compelled to join and the bill passed.

A Draft.

Someone left the door of the State Printing office open yesterday, causing a heavy draft. Jacks Prior and Plant, Harry Sutherland, Walter Cox and Frank Hayes were so affected that they will be unable to return to work.
